

Archaeology in the Old Testament

Archaeology verifies the existence of some people, cities, culture & things in the Old Testament

While archaeologists have not found everything mentioned in the Bible, they have found a lot. Nelson Glueck, the late, great 20th century archaeologist, has stated that no archaeological discovery has ever disagreed with the Bible.

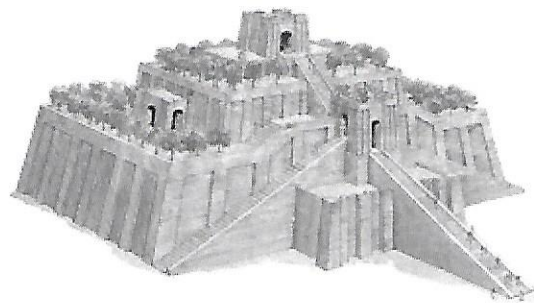

God has said to test everything to know what is really from Him (1st Thessalonians 5:21).

An example of this was the _____ nation...

Another example was _____ (1st Kings 15:20)...

Archaeological evidence has been found in cities like Jericho, Nineveh, Ur, Mari, Babylon, Elba, Megiddo, Susa, the caves of Qumran, etc., etc.

-archaeologists have discovered towers (ziggurats) in the region where the Tower of Babel is believed to have been (Genesis 11:3-9).

-in Isaiah 20:1, the Bible mentions _____, King of Assyria...

For a very partial list of archaeological discoveries, read the booklet, “Can Archaeology Prove the Old Testament?” by Ralph O. Muncaster. Also read “New Evidence That Demands A Verdict” by Josh MacDowell. There is far more archaeological evidence for the Bible than for any other ancient document/book ever written. In fact, most other holy books have little or no archaeological support at all.
