

The Problem of Evil

This means that some people will choose voluntarily to go to Hell.

C.S. Lewis has said that hell is a room that is locked from the inside.

People in hell do NOT want to get out. They do NOT want to be in God's presence ever.

So an all powerful God will separate good people from evil ones according to what those people freely choose.

Those who desire the good but are hindered by evil will no longer have their good intentions frustrated.

Those who desire to do evil but are hindered by the good will no longer be nagged by the good.

Each person, whether in heaven or hell, will be there according to their own free choice.

There are people who will say to God, "Your will be done". These people will be in heaven. There will be people that God will say, "Your will be done". These people will be in hell.

John 3:18,36 5:39-40 8:24 12:48 Luke 10:16

A world in which some people choose hell is not the best conceivable world, but it is the best achievable world if free will is to be maintained.
